

A Tradition of Excellence

Founded in 1946, the Arizona Jewish Post has been bringing its readers award-winning journalism for more than six decades.

Readers rely on the bi-weekly Arizona Jewish Post for a wide variety of local, national and international news, commentary and features, including book and movie reviews, personality profiles, and special sections concentrating on health, home, seniors, weddings, Jewish holidays and more.

The American Jewish Press Association, the Arizona Press Club, the Arizona Newspapers Association, the National Federation of Press Women, and the Arizona Press Women, Inc., have all recognized the Arizona Jewish Post for its dedication to the highest standards of journalism.

The Arizona Jewish Post continues to build on its strengths, including a renewed focus on local reporting and popular columnists such as Amy Hirshberg Lederman, whose award-winning “Reflections” column debuted in the AJP and is now published in more than a dozen Jewish newspapers nationwide. And, through its partnership with Southern Arizona’s Jewish community website, jewishtucson.org, the Arizona Jewish Post has created a vital presence on the Internet. Jewishtucson.org includes local news and feature stories from the AJP, as well as AJP BIZ, a venue for loyal advertisers to broaden their reach to consumers in Tucson and beyond.

As we move forward, readers and advertisers can continue to rely on the tradition of excellence that is the hallmark of the Arizona Jewish Post.
